Forecast For Scotland
Issued by Met Office Aberdeen
at 0400 on Wednesday 13 Jan 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Rain edging across Scotland today turning to snow in places.

Today:
The Northeast staying dry and fairly bright. Elsewhere, rain, possibly freezing rain gradually spreading from south and west, but likely turning to snow later as it reaches some central and eastern areas especially higher ground.

Tonight:
Cloudy with further rain, sleet and even snow with some disruptive falls in places especially the Borders Stirlingshire and Perthshire.

Thursday:
Cloudy with further rain at times, still falling as snow on higher ground in east though snow tending to become confined to hills as it peters out in the afternoon.

Outlook for Friday to Sunday:
Dry start Friday, but rain, hill snow later and through Saturday morning, becoming drier, brighter in afternoon. Sunny intervals and a few showers on Sunday.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.